For the too the cost of the senson there was a fairly lai crowd assembled to do the rooting. I mond College was very well represend by rooters, who, as score shows, had everything their own way. There were only a few scattered rooters for the visitors, but they did their best to encourage the losing team. The game started with some clean, snappy ball, but it soon developed into a slow, one-sided contest that had little merit for good playing on either side. William and Mary was weak in the box, none of her three pitchers being able to handle the sphere with any lasting good effect. Hening held his own for a time, but the local team soon caught on to his curves; Bolton was a little wild, and Somers did not stay in long enough to prove what he had in him. On the other hand, Gardner, for Richmond Callege, wielded a steady arm throughout his pitching, and Lake was not far behind. The fielding was good on both sides, though there was no opportunity for any brilliant exhibitions.

Game in Detail.

William and Mary took the field. Hening pitched well, and Richmond did not reach first. William and Mary came to the bat, and score one run by some good, steady playing. This was the only score that the visitors made until the seventh inning. The game progressed slowly until the third inning, when Richardson, of Richmond College, went to bat, and, with a good field swagger, brought in three runs. Saunders followed with another good hit, and brought in a run, and he was followed in turn by Miller, who chrought the score-up to five, when-the crowd went wild, the rooters cheering for all they were worth.

William and Mary, coming to the bat, did not reach first.

In the fourth inning neither side scored. In the fifth inning, with Richmond College at the bat, with three men on bases. Saunders was struck by a wild throw from the pitcher, and Handy was forced in, running the score-up to six. Gardner was then forced in by abase on balls, and later Saunders and Talman came in on a pop fly. Richmond College had nine to her credit. William and Mary, coming to bat, is again forced to retire without score. In the sixth turn at the bat the Spiders add two more to their credit, with some good base running, and William and Mary, coming to the bat in better shape and with dogged determination, adds two, making three for the entire score.

Richardson goes to bat and makes third by stealing two bases and is brought in by Martin, William and Mary at bat, two are struck out, Marsden makes seeseventh Richmond College struck out, Marsden makes sec-

The game was the first of a series to played between the two institutions, though not one of the series for the championship. There was some good individual playins, though the team work, especially of the Oran and White, was of a wask order. Marsden, for the visitors, played a good first base, and did some good batting. Miller played a good centre field, and Wynkoop promises well at short stop. For Richmond College Gardner did steady pitching, and Richardson, with his batting and his good work at third base, rounded out with more than good credit to himself. Talman played well at short, and Martin played up at the bat.

Shephard Eligible.

Shephard Eligible.

Melvin W. Shephard, America's greatest amateur one mile runner, is also eligible to compete in the Olympian games in Athens. The charges of professionalism made against the Irish-American Atheite Club's runner have not been proven. That is the opinion and decision of the members of the Atheite Union, who have been taking testimony in the case and who completed their labors at a meeting hald in the Wyandot Club house, in East Fifty-eighth Street, yesterday. The exact ruling on the case as announced by the committee is.

Resolved, As evidence produced on both sides in the matter of investigation of charges against Melvin W. Shephard before the Registration Committee is not deemed satisfactory to the committee for the purpose of dismissing or sustaining the charges, and there being no present prospects of procuring more satisfactory testimony and proof, the committee has resolved to proceed no further at present and will drop the charges, at the same time reserving the right to review the present charges and investigation on its own motion.

John Boyle explained that as matters now stand Shephard is an amateur atheite in good standing, and athletic club holding membership in the Amateur Atheite in the Illaso means that as an athlete in good standing Shephard can compete in the Olympian games with the approval of the parent body of amateur athletics in the United States.
